Street Railroads.

The difference between a legal and a judicial opinion was never more clearly manifested than in the late case of the CINCINNATI STREET RAILROD Company. Their solicitor, Mr. Gholson, who has recently left the bench of the Superior Court of the city and gone into pactice, has given his clients all the aid and comfort a lawyer who has been a Judge could confer. He has told them to go on and condemn the streets in the line of their route from Pendleton, on the east side, to Cumminsville, on the north-west of Cincinnati. He is now leading that band of "pioneers" who compose the Company before the Probate Court of Judge Hilton, in their proceedings to condemn the route. For several days the litigation was advancing and retrograding under the Judge, resisted by Mr. Hayes and by John Torrence at the head of the committee of the Council. The city was up and doing, and did not mean to let her rights go by default. The Company had an advantage in the tribunal, for it appears that Judge Hilton was a pioneer subscriber for five hundred dollars of stock, which he has assigned to the President, Dr. Vattier-for what consideration and under what circumstances does not absolutely appear. He no doubt intended to divest himself of pecuniary interest in the Company, so as to qualify himself to sit on the present case. But that he has not succeeded, is easily shown. A BONA FIDE subscriber cannot divest himself of the liability to pay up his subscription for stock, by assignment of it to another. Nor can he evade the claims of creditors of the Company by such a proceeding, for the Constitution of Ohio to-night, and catch my customer asleep." makes him liable to creditors to the ex- The City Fathers must keep a tight eye open, tent of double the value of his shares But, if the Judge could assign, the President of the Company had no power to receive the assignment. And if there were no other reasons, it seems clear that the Probate Judge will be pronounced by the higher Court incompetent to sit, on the ground of his interest in the subject mat-

The premises on which the Company proceeds, are as slender as the tribunal itself is incompetent.

Mr. Gholson's opinion is that of a rigid follower of precedents and literal construction. He is not remarkable for his power over the spirit of the law; he sticks often in the book where he finds enough to satisfy him. A case cripples his mind, if an authority precludes vigorous investigation. The reason of the rule is hardly ever as sacred to a lawver's conscience as the rule itself; and Mr. Gholson, alalthough eminent in his profession, master of learning, and familiar with its adjudications, besides being most capable of giving his opinions in a clear and sententious form, is still a lawyer advising his clients and earning his fees. We are not satisfied with that advice, and we think that one effect of restoring him to the Bench will be to shake his confidence in this last professional effort. He relies on the general law of Ohio for corporations, passed in 1852. That law authorises companies for making rail roads; and it does provide for the proceedings in the Probate Court, if the authorities of a town or city will not agree with a rail road corporation about the use of the streets. It is certain however, that eity street rails were not in the legislative mind of 1852, but that the law contemplated ordinary rail roads, and questions arising from them, in the towns through which they run, on their way to their destination. Indeed, there is all the difference between the two that you find between the stage coach and the omnibus. One is made to carry passengers long journeys-the other to pick up a living in the city streets. And it is as unfair to bring the latter under a general stage eoach law prior, say, to 1850, as to strain the rail road law in the same way. About that year omnibusses were introduced, and began to grow into such necessaries of life as they have become all over Christendom. Every city has them, AND EVERY CITY MUST REGULATE THEM. They carn money exclusively within the city streets. The difference between the two is not more apparent than that which exists between the city passenger car and the New Nork and Boston train of said road. It privileges in the country; but how would it look in a crowded city for omnibuses? Yet, if such had been the letter of the stage coach law, Mr. Gholson would have compounded the omnibus in that category, and seen no difference brought about by the great social change of that new system which is now about to be superceded by his street rail roads. If he had been an omnibus adviser, he would have insisted on his rights to be considered a stage coach; and would have strained the letter of the law beyond its spirit.

The Gazette has well stated the inapplicability of certain provisions of the general rail road law to the case of street rail roads. The city authorities HAVE NO Purcell and Bishop Henne, of Milwauked. LAND to be condemned, and the damages provided for were never contemplated to the easement. The city streets can not be FENCED up for rail road companies. The Council cannot allow the legislature lay down tracks, and fix stations for wood, water, passengers and depots without any permission of the city authorities. But there is no end to the errors involved in the late proceeding of the Probate Court. The Council had better go on with its ordinance, and rely on public competition for

THE PIG "NOT" IN THE POKE.-The recent failure of a noted "Street Railroad Company" to 'bag' a route, reminded us of a scene witnessed yesterday morning, hereabouts. Snug by the southern exposure of the wall of one of our stately city edifices-horrible dictu !-- a swinery is in full blast, where porkers are fed and fatted. The mouth of one of the neighbors watered for the best of the litter, and the aid of a son of the Emerald Isle (from Cork by way of Philadelphia,) was employed to engineer through the hazardous effort, by love or force, and get the "fatted pig." A pan liberally supplied with oute was freely used, and Pat proudly and confidently approached into the middle of the family of big pigs and little pigs, and took hold of the hind leg of the pig he wanted; but he had dragged the shoat but a short way, before he found out that there was some one to say "object;" for the pig sque aled, the mother squaled, all squealed; the old sow pushed after Pat with jaws opened, and Pat, with ludicrous grace, backed out alarmed, with wife and neighbors pealing their loud laughs at his repulse. Pat, not to be outdone, determined to make another effort, and vacated the field hurriedly; at dinner time he came back with a bag, mind made up that he had the pig this time, euro; but the knowing animal frisked about so, that not even the Probate Court arrangement of a green bag, could draw him on. Pat made a dead set for his game, but it eluded his clutch; the guffaw of the neighbors, even the old women around, nearly set Pat out of his wits, and he went off muttering, while the uncaught pig quirled his tail with a knowing shake, walked back to the pene Pat, aroused almost to fury, by the unexpected turn affairs took, started off, muttering: "I will consult my counsel-my wife-by faith, I will come back or by some coup d'etat like Pat's, the Monopo ly will catch Council asleep.

THE Persia brings dates from Liverpool to the 11th inst. The Austrians seem to be losing battles daily. They have withdrawn their forces beyond the river Adda. The House of Commons having declared a want of confidence, England will have another ministry. Queen Victoria has had five parliaments and numerous changes in the ministry. France is tumultuous with loud vives to the Emperor, and the eathedrals are vocal with chants of Te Deums for the victory.

Local News.

BURGLARIES .- Several burglaries have been perpetrated in this city recently, and in every instance without the guilty parties being arrested. The rascals evince great boldness in their plan of operations, making their entries into houses by means of ladders placed against the second story windows. That burglaries should be so repeatedly and so successfully committed by means such as these, argues but poorly for the vigilance of our police. We cannot believe that ladders can be carried through the streets at night and placed against houses for the purpose of robbing, without those bearing them being discovered by the police, were those officials attending to their duty instead of congregating together on the corner of some remote street in their ward.

On Monday night a burglary of this kind was attempted, almost within hall of the Ninth-street station-house. Mr. N. Bartlett, who resides on Ninth street, between Race and Elm, was awakened by a noise in his room. and discovered a man in the act of rifling the pockets of his pantaloons. He instantly arose and grappled with the thief, but being a much smaller man than the robber was unable to prevent him from making his escape through a window and down a ladder into the street. During the struggle Mr. Bartlett ascertained that the burglar was a white man, but that his face had been blackened artificially. He endeavored to throw over the ladder as the thief was descending, but was unsuccessful. On the same night the house of Mr. C. M. Brougham, No. 419 Sycamore street, was entered in the same manner, but with better success. In this instance the thief carried the clothing of Mr. B. into the street and there rifled them of their contents. They also carried off some jewelry belonging to Mrs.

SUDDEN DEPRECIATION IN RAILROAD STOCK .-Owing to the existing war, and failure to "monopolize" a right of way, the stock of the projected Cincinnati Street Railroad Company has fallen to a quarter of a mill.

GREAT SALE OF LOTS ON WESTERN ROW, FINDLAY AND JOHN STREETS .- The sale of lots by Cooper & Stokes will commence this afternoon at three o'clock, on the west-side of Westmight be all well enough to give stage ern Row, between Findlay and Livingston onches the right of the road, and other | streets.

THURSDAY is "Corpus Christi Day." A feetival is observed on its recurrence by the Cathofic Church in all latitudes and in all lands. There will be a grand procession of the sacrament in the cathedral of this city, attended by the various German and English religious charitable rocieties of the church. Most of those attending at the cathedral will bear lighted tapers in their hands. The ceremonies of laying the foundation stone of the large Catholic Institute to be creeted at Vine and Longworth streets, will come off also in the morning. Hon. Joseph Egly will deliver an cration in German, and P. McGroarty in English. The concluding exercises of the day will take place at Pike's Opera House in the evening, when an oration will be pronounced by Donald F. X. McLood. Also addresses by Arch-Bishop

FRIA THROUGH-NARROW ESCAPE.-Some engineering is evidently necessary to relieve the cars of the "monopoly" which, on first trial, unexpectedly fell into a "hole erected in the ground," at a point where twelve men, to regulate vehicles using the streets of specially sent out by Judge Hilton, to test the Cincinnati; nor can any number of Com- strength of some bridging-"just a few panies proceed to take up pavements and planks," laid by a gentleman latterly from ed over the spot to test the solidity of the structure. The jury made a narrow escape. Some of the party who are sufferers, cruelly wish that the jury had fallen in with the weak structure.

price, at Wood's Theater. The change is to take place after this evening. The admission prices will now be thirty cents to the dress circle and parquette, and twenty cents to the H family circle. Birch & Donniker's Minstrels, recognized as being in the front ranks of their profession, commence, this evening, a limited engagement at this establishment.

THE MASON'S FESTIVAL .- Thursday, the 24th inst., is St. John's day, and will be properly observed by masons far and near. E.S. Lippett will deliver the address. Half fare tickets can be obtained. Cars start at a few minutes after six o'clock in the morning, by Marietta railroad. Members will be prepared in pic-nic style for the Lynchburgh celebration-

HEAVY PROST .- The verdict of the jury in the Probate Court of this city, fell upon the sprouting verdure of "monopoly" like a frost, on a space of seven feet wide and over eighteen miles of the streets of our city. It is strange that no injurious effects have been visible outside of the line surveyed for the LATE "Cincinnati Street Rai! Road Co."

LAW REPORT.

COMMON PLEAS. CRIMINAL SIDE,-The State vs. Charles

A jury was empanneled before Judge Dickson to try this defendant upon the charge of arson—attempting to set fire to the building It appeared in testimony that on the 1st of between three and four o'clock in the morning, a light was seen blazing up in the saloon called the "Identical," under the Theater, at the corner of the alley on Vine Some of the officers who were passing by broke in and found fire in three or four aces. The defendant, who was the tenant at that time, in occupation of the saloon, being seen to come out a short time before, was arrested on suspicion of being the perpetrator of the act. The building, at that time, was owned by Miss Eliza Logan and Mr. Bagwell. T. A. Logan testified that he had purchased it at Sheriff's sale: as the attorney in fact of the former, and as the agent of the latter. It was rented to defendant at the rate of $1,000 a year, payable weekly or monthly. Defendant had an insurance upon his stock and fixtures. The act is denied on the part of the defend-ant, and exceptions taken to the indictment. W. H. Kerr for the State; Wm. Kirk for the

and other officers of this Company being in Court in the foreneon, Judge Hilton made in-quiry as to whether they were prepared to pay Dr. Vattier replied they did not feel disposed to accept the verdiet which had been returned; and would decline paying the jury fee until they had an opportunity of further consulting with their counsel.

The Court stated the amount of the jury fee vas about $175—this included mileage and $1 50 per diem to each juror.

The jurors received certificates of their attendance, &c., and probably received their fees out of the public purse.
